三、阅读理解 (20 分)

A

If the food in a supermarket is not fresh anymore or is near the "sell-by date", it goes into trash bins too. Every day, a large amount of food is wasted.

To cut down on food waste, France passed a new law last month. It forbids(禁止) supermarkets to throw away unsold food. Instead, they must donate it to charities. For food that isn't safe for humans to eat, it can be used as animal feed (饲料). If not, the supermarkets will face fines of up to 75,000 euros (around 542,200 yuan) or two years in prison. The law also encourages educational programs for schools and businesses about food waste.

France is the first country to make a law that forbids wasting food, but it is actually a worldwide problem. According to the United Nations, each year, 1.3 billion tons of food is wasted all over the world, and just 25 percent of that food could feed all the hungry people in the world.

The good thing is that people around the world are trying different things to deal with the food waste problem. Galdakao, Spain, puts a public fridge in the center of town. Anyone can drop off food and anyone can come and take them. A supermarket in Canada, Loblaws, encourages people to buy “ugly food” by selling them at lower prices, so they won’t end up being wasted. In China, we also have the “clear your plate” campaign (光盘行动). This means you should eat everything on your plate or take away the food you haven’t eaten up.

C. 1.3 billion tons. D. About 1.6 billion tons.
- () 44. In Spain, a public fridge is put in the center of town in order to_____.
A. help people not to waste food B. encourage people to buy “ugly food”
C. have people clear your plate D. keep food as animal feed
- () 45. From the last paragraph, we can learn that_____.
A. food waste problem was becoming more serious.

One afternoon, I toured an art museum while waiting for my husband to finish a business meeting. I was looking forward to a quiet view of the art works.

A young couple viewing the paintings ahead of me chatted nonstop between themselves. I watched them a moment and decided the wife was doing all the talk. I admired the husband’s patience for putting up with her continuous talk. Distracted by their noise, I moved on.

I met with them several times as I moved through the different rooms of art. Each time I heard her constant burst of words, I moved away quickly.

I was standing at the counter of the museum gift shop making a purchase when the couple came near to the exit. Before they left, the man reached into his pocket and pulled out a white object. He extended it into a long stick and then tapped his way into the coatroom to get his wife’s jacket.

“He’s a brave man.” The clerk at the counter said, “Most of us would give up if we were blinded at such a young age. During his recovery, he made a promise that his life wouldn’t change. So, as before, he and his wife come in whenever there’s a new art show.”

“But what does he get out of the art?” I asked, “He can’t see.”

“Can’t see? You’re wrong. He sees a lot. More than you or I do.” The clerk said, “His wife describes each painting so he can see it in his head.”

I learned something about patience, courage and love that day. I saw the patience of a young wife describing paintings to a person without sight and the courage of a husband who would not allow blindness to change his life. And I saw the love shared by two people as I watched this couple walk away hand in hand.

Have you ever had trouble sleeping in a new place?

Lots of people do. And now researchers from Brown University in Rhode Island think they know why. They found that one-half of the brain "remains more awake" than the other half when people are trying to sleep in a new place.

The sleep findings were reported in Current Biology by Brown University. In their report, the researchers said many people report they have a harder time sleeping the first night at a hotel or other places outside their home. They call it "first-night influence". In Japan they say, "If you change your bed, you can't sleep," said Yuka Sasaki, one of the report's writers. "You don't sleep very well in a new place. We all know about it."

The researchers measured brain waves (测量脑波) for 35 volunteers over two nights in a laboratory. The two nights were a week apart (间隔). They found during the first night the left half of the brain was more active than the right half. This was during the first deep-sleep period, the researchers said.

Sasaki said a lot of questions remain.

Researchers did not keep measuring brain waves all night long. So, they don't know if the left half keeps "watch" all night, or whether it "works in shifts (轮换) with the right half later in the night". They also do not know why the brain activity, at least during the first period of deep sleep, is always on the left half.

For some, this research may be calming. It is good to know that our brain is "looking out for us" in a new place. But it may not help with sleep. That brain activity, at least according to this new research, makes it harder to get the sleep people need to wake up well rested in the morning.

- () 51. How many times did the researchers measure brain waves for 35 volunteers?
A. Once. B. Twice. C. Three times. D. Four times.
- () 52. The researchers found _____ during the first deep-sleep period.
A. the brain waves remained the same
B. the brain activity helped with sleep
C. the right half of the brain kept "watch"
D. the left half of the brain was more active
- () 53. Which of the following is one of the questions that remain?
A. Whether the new bed keeps you from sleeping.
B. How you have trouble sleeping in a new place.
C. Why the brain activity is always on the left half.
D. What people can do when they can't sleep well.
- () 54. The underlined word "calming" has the closest meaning to" _____.
A. pleasing B. different C. serious D. strange
- () 55. What is the text mainly about?
A. What we will have to do to sleep well. B. How researchers measure brain waves.
C. Who doesn't sleep well in a new place. D. Why it's harder to sleep in a new place.

D

Today is December 15th, 2030. Influenced by the launch (发射) of the first manned mission (载人任务) to Mars next month, you will most likely get a gift card for a space trip.

The interest in trips, 100km above the surface of the Earth, has grown steadily since such a trip began. However, the market has grown much larger this year since the official announcement of the Mars mission. More low-cost spacelines have entered the market and you can now find flights for such a trip for as low as $ 3,495. It's very reasonable.

Space tourism (旅游业) is one of the markets that have developed fast during the last ten years, with the opening of the Starbright Hotel on the moon as well as the low orbital (低轨道) hotels that started accepting guests. However, accommodation in space is still expensive for the average household, so the suborbital (亚轨道的) flights with thirty-minute weightlessness during the three-hour flight will for some time be the most popular trip.

However, the spacelines might in the future face fierce competition between space elevators (太空升降舱), like the one that is projected to start construction (开始建设) within two years. Once it is fully functional, it will start to ship cargo (货物) to space. But it will accept passengers as soon as possible to get back the large investment. Even if the elevator becomes successful, it will take several years before there are more elevators in the world to get in the competition for space traffic with the spacelines.

Those who are looking for a little bit of adventure and have extra money to spend may want to consider a suborbital flight in space. While a suborbital flight may not be the space mission that you have always dreamed of, it will give you the rare opportunity to see what our planet looks like in a high-altitude flight outside our atmosphere. So before you enjoy a trip by elevator to space, enjoy a suborbital flight first.

- () 56. From Paragraph 1, what will happen in January, 2031?
A. A gift card will be taken to Mars. B. Mars will be explored for the first time.

- C. An affordable space trip will come true.
- () 57. The underlined "average" can most probably be replaced by _____ in this passage.
A. common B. high-income C. low-income
- () 58. What is the space elevator's purpose in accepting passengers as soon as possible?
A. To ship cargo to space. B. To get back the large investment.
C. To start the construction of more space elevators.
- () 59. Which of the following is NOT TRUE according to the passage?
A. Space tourism has developed fast during the last ten years.
B. The suborbital flights will be the most popular trip for some time.
C. Even though the elevator becomes successful, we still wait for a few years to see more elevators come out.
- () 60. We can know from the passage that _____.
A. the low orbital hotels have opened since a space trip began
B. within two years, space elevators will begin to ship cargo and people to space
C. during the suborbital flights, you will experience 30 minutes weightlessness
